话题 黑洞·太空 | 新词 144 | 新义 14 | 短语 24 | 全文 482 词

1 「You probably hear of black holes all the time.」[1]

	/ˈprɒbəbli/	/hɪə(r)/	新义 /əv/	/blæk/	hole /həʊl/
	adv. 很可能	vi. 听说	prep. 关于	adj. 黑色的	n.[C] 洞
		hear of 听说		black hole 黑洞

语法 1 句型二：主语 + 谓语 + 宾语 主语 + 谓语 + 宾语，谓语是及物动词，后面要接动作的对象。 hear of 后接 black holes，说听说的是什么，它就是宾语。

术语：grammar /ˈgræmə(r)/ n.[U] 语法； object /ˈɒbdʒɪkt/ n.[C] 宾语； paragraph /ˈpærəgrɑːf/ n.[C] 段落； unit /ˈjuːnɪt/ n.[C] 单元

代词 人称代词分主格和宾格，物主代词表示“谁的”，反身代词表示“自己”。 You 指读者“你”，是人称代词主格，在句首作主语。

一般现在时 一般现在时表示经常发生的动作、现在的状态或客观事实。 hear 说常有的事；主语是 he/she/it 时动词加 -s，如 He puts。

名词复数 可数名词有单数和复数两种形式，不可数名词一般没有复数形式。 hole 加 -s 成复数 holes；以 s、x、ch、sh 结尾的加 -es。

术语：spelling /ˈspelɪŋ/ n.[U] 拼写

冠词 a / an / the 不定冠词泛指某一个人或物，定冠词特指双方都知道的那一个。 all the time 是固定说法，意为“一直”，其中 the 不能省。

术语：article /ˈɑːtɪkl/ n.[C] 冠词

形容词和副词 形容词用来修饰名词，副词用来修饰动词、形容词或其他副词。 black 是形容词，修饰 holes；probably 是副词，修饰 hear。

定语 定语用来修饰、限定名词，说明“什么样的”“哪一个”“谁的”。 black 放在 holes 前作定语，说明是什么样的洞。

限定词和数量词 放在名词前说明数量或范围，如 some、many、much、every。 all 放在 the time 前说范围：全部的时间。

状语 说明动作的时间、地点、方式、程度、原因等。 probably 说可能性，all the time 说多常，都修饰 hear。

名词短语作状语 表示时间、距离、次数的名词短语可直接作状语，不用介词。 all the time 前面没有介词，直接说明多常听到。

动词短语 动词 + 副词/介词，意思常要整体记。 hear of 整体意为“听说”，后面接听说的事物。

You	probably	hear of	black holes	all the time
主语（代词）	状语（副词，说可能）	谓语（动词短语）	宾语（名词短语）	状语（名词短语，说频率）

These extreme objects sit at the heart of every large galaxy.[2] extreme /ɪkˈstriːm/ adj. 极端的 object /ˈɒbdʒɪkt/ n.[C] 物体 heart /hɑːt/ n.[sing.] 中心 at the heart of 在……的中心 every /ˈevri/ det. 每个 large /lɑːdʒ/ adj. 大的

galaxy /ˈgæləksi/ n.[C] 星系

语法 2 句型一：主语 + 谓语 主语 + 谓语，谓语是不及物动词，后面不接宾语句子就完整。sit 后面不接宾语，加上说地点的 at... 句子就完整。

指示代词 this/these 指近的，that/those 指远的或前面说过的。These 指上句的 black holes，复数所以用 these。

介词短语 介词短语由介词加名词或代词构成，用来表示时间、地点、方式等。at the heart 是介词短语，说黑洞在哪里。

名词所有格 名词加's 表示"……的"；物与物之间多用 of。the heart of every large galaxy 用 of 表示"每个大星系的中心"。

后置定语 介词短语等作定语时放在名词后面。of every large galaxy 放在 heart 后面，说明是谁的中心。

These extreme objects — 主语（名词短语） sit — 谓语（不及物动词）
at the heart of every large galaxy — 状语（介词短语，说地点）

Still, most of us feel a strong pull towards them.[3] most of 中的大多数 feel /fiːl/ vt. 感受到

strong /strɒŋ/ adj. 强烈的

语法 3 插入语 插在句中的补充说明，用逗号隔开，去掉后句子仍完整。Still 用逗号隔开，意为"尽管如此"，去掉句子仍完整。

主谓一致 谓语动词的单复数要和主语一致。most of us 指"我们中多数人"，是复数，所以 feel 不加 -s。

He found (find) out that part of the reason is "kick-in-the-pants (/pænts/ n.[pl.] 裤子; kick-in-the-pants 懊悔自责的) thinking (/ˈθɪŋkɪŋ/ n.[U] 思维；想法): after a choice (/tʃɔɪs/ n.[C] 选择), we think about the choice we didn't make. 「Staying (stay) and losing (lose) doesn't hurt (新义 /hɜːt/ vi. 让人难受) much, but if you switch and lose, you feel much sorrier (sorry /ˈsɒri/ adj. 更懊悔的): a win that was once (新义 /wʌns/ adv. 曾经) yours is now lost (lose), and that feels (feel) worse than never having it.」[2]

When his old friend Andrew Vázsonyi (/ˌændruː ˈvɑːʒəni/ n. 安德鲁·瓦若尼) showed (show) him the puzzle, Erdős asked for a reason to switch. When Vázsonyi didn't provide (/prəˈvaɪd/ vt. 提供) one, Erdős asked, "What's the matter (新义 /ˈmætə(r)/ n.[sing.] 问题；毛病; What's the matter (with sb)?……怎么了？) with you?" Vázsonyi later wrote in an article (/ˈɑːtɪkl/ n.[C] 文章), "I said that I was sorry (新义 /ˈsɒri/ adj. 抱歉的), but I didn't have a common-sense (/ˈkɒmən/ adj. 普通的 /sens/ n.[U] 判断力; common-sense 常识性的) explanation (/ˌekspləˈneɪʃn/ n.[C] 解释)."

leave /liːv/ vt. 留下

10 I agreed that switching was right, but I still wondered: why should my first choice affect my second choice? "That idea is so natural, but it's actually wrong," says mathematician Jason Rosenhouse. Monty knows where the car is and only ever opens a goat door. To understand this, you need to put yourself in Monty's shoes.

The lock did not stop him: Wei got out anyway and took a train to Shanghai alone with 200 yuan in his pocket. He called them "magical shoes". The shoes on his feet felt so light that he forgot he was wearing them. Second, his coaches, who had confidence in him even when he didn't believe in himself. That has changed. From now on, he said, "I believe in myself." 「Third, six months of training at his training place in Addis Ababa, the capital city of Ethiopia, which is high above the sea, and the "amazing weather" in London on race day.」[4] 6 Diejiao's modern races are believed to have begun in the early 1980s. A team has about 40 people: 32 rowers, one person beating the drum, and several people controlling the boat at each end. The course is 500 to 650 metres long. A race takes two to four minutes, and the end can be very close. Liu learned to row as a child, but he only started to race in about 2010. His parents used heavy boats made of ironwood. Now the boats are made with lighter wood, mostly for speed: light wood speeds the boats up. A fast boat is everything. As a Guangdong saying goes, "It's better to break the boat than be late." Nobody wants to be late for the finish.

"We have spent more than 20,000 yuan /juˈɑːn/ n.[C] 元（人民币） on drinking water alone, and tens of thousands more on food during the two months of training," Liu says. 8 Still, the locals say they don't care about the money, as long as their traditions continue. He Xiangzhi, a 54-year-old villager in Dongsheng, grew up attending the races. "When I was young, I often went from door to door, beating a gong to collect money for the Dragon Boat Dinner," he told a news website. The dinner was once cooked for the racers, but today the whole village eats it.

3 The hunt for the two men began as soon as people realised they were lost. Noel Odell, a member of their team, searched for nearly two hours. Then he understood how small the chances were on such a huge field of rocks. Nine years later, in 1933, British climbers found an ice axe that had belonged to Irvine, above 8,000 metres. Later, more stories came out, mostly from Chinese climbers, about a body, or maybe two, lying somewhere above 8,000 metres.

4 Between 1960 and 1995, there were at least four reports of "an old English dead" on the mountain. [But they did not help a lot: they reached English-speaking climbers out of order and in difficult language, so it was hard to know whom people had really seen. [3]

译3 但这些报告帮助不大：传到说英语的登山者那里时，内容已经颠三倒四，语言也很难懂，所以很难知道人们到底看到的是谁。

5 Using these reports, two researchers, Jochen Hemmleb and Tom Holzel, marked out an area to search in 1999. Hemmleb, who has been searching for Irvine for more than a quarter of a century, joined that trip. When the team found a body, they thought it was Irvine, until a name on the clothes let them recognise it as George Mallory.

6 On Wednesday night, the Chinese Weiqi Association said that the Korea Baduk Association had told the Chinese team about the new rules before the finals. The team had done training before the match and had reminded its players about it. But even after all this, Ke himself still had trouble with the rule.

7 Then came the third game on Thursday, the one that would decide everything. Ke lost some stones in the lower-left corner early on and fell behind. But he still had more time left on his clock than Byun. During the game, the LG Cup said Ke had once again failed to put a captured stone on the lid. He was penalised two points.

How Ne Zha Beat Star Wars

影评·Film Review

话题 中国动画·哪吒 | 新词 40 | 新义 26 | 短语 26 | 全文 854 词

1 Just like its wild young hero, the Chinese cartoon film Ne Zha II has been almost impossible to stop. It came out in China over the Spring Festival, and since then it has earned more than $2 billion around the world. That is more than any of the Star Wars sequels. It is now the top film of 2025, the most successful cartoon film of all time, and the most successful film ever made in a language other than English.

2 All that success has got people talking. Some English-language news outlets said it was a sign of "national pride" in China. "Yet as Slate reporter Jenny Zhang pointed out, Chinese audiences, who are behind most of the film's ticket sales, did not all love it."[1]

4 Even if many Americans are not interested in Ne Zha, there is no question that the film is a huge hit. The first film, Ne Zha, which came out in 2019, was very popular too. It is the second most successful cartoon film ever made outside the US. The new film goes even bigger: a wild, crowded action comedy, full of pictures that catch your eye and need a cinema screen. 5 What about Ne Zha himself? A hero from Chinese folk stories, he has appeared in films and TV shows made in the country for about a hundred years. He looks great: he can make wheels of fire under his feet and fly through the air, which is very cool. His stories can also be told in many ways. He is usually shown as a wild boy who learns to control himself and listen to his parents. But older cartoons show him quite differently: in a 1979 film he is a sad hero who gives up his own life, while in a 2003 TV series he is funnier and more family-friendly.

10 That comes from his own story. In 2020 he was 15 and stuck at home, at a low in his life. There was no school and no football, just video games all day. He was in low spirits; he felt blue and lost. Then he came across the Japanese cartoon One Piece, and its main character Luffy helped him get over those hard times. 11 As a boy, Speed wanted to go to space, and he finds it funny how that dream is coming to life now. He calls Elon Musk "a smart guy" who could make such a trip happen. But to questions about the problems people have with Musk, his answer was short: "I'm not going to speak on it." He has never been shy about speaking his mind, but he wants his messages to be about "fun, joy, and confidence, because that's who I am at the end of the day". That sunny side is the real Speed.

6 So he decided to build the Backrooms himself with computer programs. In his video, a person is chased through the rooms by something dangerous. It spread like wildfire. 译3 玛丽（由蕾娜特·赖因斯夫饰演）的工作是帮他解决问题；在和她的谈话中，他努力弄明白，是哪些走错的路结束了他的婚姻，又让他没能成为建筑设计师。

Mary has her own past: as a child, she was kept (keep) inside (新义 /ˌɪnˈsaɪd/ adv. 在室内) by her mother, with old yellow (新词性 /ˈjeləʊ/ adj. 黄色的) newspaper /ˈnjuːzpeɪpə(r)/ n.[U] 报纸 over (新义 /ˈəʊvə(r)/ prep. 盖在……上) the windows (新义 window /ˈwɪndəʊ/ n.[C] 窗户).

9 Late one night, when the lights (新义 light /laɪt/ n.[C] 灯) in the store are going on and off (go on and off 忽亮忽灭) as usual, (as usual 像往常一样) Clark walks downstairs /ˌdaʊnˈsteəz/ adv. 到楼下 to find out what is wrong. That's when he notices (notice) a line of light in the wall. He finds (find) he can walk right through it into another world: never-ending (never-ending 永无止境的) rooms, one after another. (one after another 一个接一个) Many of the things in them seem familiar /fəˈmɪliə(r)/ adj. 熟悉的 (be familiar to sb 为……所熟悉) to him at first, but something about them is off. deeply: deep + -ly → 副词; adv. 深深地 mine: /maɪn/ pron. 我的（粉丝）

语法 1 不定式的否定 不定式的否定形式是 not to do，not 放在 to 前面。not to give them too much：not 在 to 前，意思是"别给粉丝太多"。

Such fans love to solve problems, and the ideas they build can weigh a story down, so he wanted to be careful with them. That is probably why the film gives no big answers.

problem; idea; 新义 /bɪld/ vt. 构建；建立; weigh sth down 拖累; be careful with 小心对待; answer

11 It is set in the 1990s, so Clark cannot look up his questions on Google or put videos of the rooms on YouTube. A story born on the internet, told with no internet at all, is a clever turn. 「Like the Overlook Hotel in The Shining, the Backrooms keep viewers inside long after the film has ended, still searching for a hidden meaning.」[4] be set in 以……为背景; look up 查找; question; Google /ˈguːgl/ n. 谷歌（搜索网站）; video; bear; 新义 /tɜːn/ n.[C]（情节的）转折; Overlook /ˈəʊvəlʊk/ n. 远景（酒店名）; Hotel /həʊˈtel/ n.[C] 酒店; The Shining /ðə ˈʃaɪnɪŋ/ n.《闪灵》（恐怖电影）; end; search; hide

译 4 就像《闪灵》里的远景酒店一样，电影结束很久以后，后室仍把观众"困"在里面，让他们继续寻找藏在其中的含义。

12 Most of all, Backrooms is really scary. The Wired writer walked out to his car in a silent underground parking building and found himself looking over his shoulder, half expecting to hear footsteps behind him.

most of all 最重要的是; silent /ˈsaɪlənt/ adj. 寂静的; underground /ˈʌndəgraʊnd/ adj. 地下的; parking /ˈpɑːkɪŋ/ n.[U] 停车; find; look over one's shoulder 回头张望; 新词性 /hɑːf/ adv. 半；有几分; expect; footstep

13 The film is expected to break A24's opening- weekend record. Some people see it as a sign that Hollywood will look to YouTube for its next horror directors. Others think all the talk is simply because Backrooms is something hard to find today: a completely new story.

Life in the German league (/liːg/ n.[C] 联赛) was very different. The gyms (gym /dʒɪm/ n.[C] 体育馆) were small and the fans sat close to (close to 紧挨着) the table. The team often took a bus (/bʌs/ n.[C] 大巴车) to small towns he had never heard of. In China's national team, he had faced (新义 face /feɪs/ vt. 与……交手；对阵) the best players in the world. He was quiet (/ˈkwaɪət/ adj. 文静的) and easy-going, (easy-going 随和的) and he thought about the team first. When he lost, he did not stay sad for long. Detective Ryan Chin of the Miami police reviewed Zahr's photos and video and found the driver. LESSON 30

One Pen, One Lamp, One Night

幽默随笔·Humorous Essay

话题 寒假作业·亲子 | 新词 17 | 新义 22 | 短语 30 | 全文 898 词

1 “What is Chinese speed? I am reporting live from a winter homework rush.” “The holiday is almost used up. 「With one pen and one lamp, the young flowers of our country can work wonders in just one night...” [1]

新词性 report /rɪˈpɔːt/ vi. 报道 report live 现场报道
新义 /rʌʃ/ n.[sing.] 赶工；匆忙 use use up 用完 flower wonder work wonders 创造奇迹

译1 一支笔，一盏灯，祖国的花朵们只用一夜就能创造奇迹……

2 For the last few days, videos like these have been all over my phone: kids racing to finish their winter homework before school starts. Parents complain, then sit up with them anyway. In some homes the whole family joins in, treating the half-finished homework like an emergency.

sit up 熬夜

3 At first I laughed so hard. Then my brain suddenly woke up: I pictured my own child in those videos, and I stopped laughing at once. So I sent them to a good friend with two sons. After all, two people suffering is better than one.

5 These kids may work harder than Olympic champions. Late at night, when the skiing star Eileen Gu is already enjoying her ten hours of sleep, they are still at their desks, racing against time.

6 The homework can be done anywhere. They write on the underground, in shopping centres, in fast food restaurants and on planes. No time? Make time! Fall asleep? Write with your eyes closed! 「How much kids and parents can do depends only on how many hours are left before school.」[2]

8 The last two days before school are also a real test of friendship. If your kid is weak at English but strong at maths, and has a friend who is the other way round, the two will probably work together.[3] strong 新义 /strɒŋ/ adj. 擅长的

the other way round 正好相反

译3 如果你家孩子英语差、数学好，又有个朋友正好相反，两人多半会合作。

All in all, the goal is: "Teacher, you can say I didn't try my best, but you can't say I didn't do my homework!"

all in all 总之
try one's best 尽最大努力

9 Hard times bring new ideas. When visiting relatives, kids may borrow an older cousin's finished homework from years before. They may cry until their parents help. I did that myself as a kid: at midnight I still couldn't finish, so I cried until my mum helped me write it. And if all else fails, the homework simply goes missing. It got wet, the dog ate it, the house caught fire, or it was left on the underground.

10 For parents, the night before school is full of pressure. The kid is slow, can't do the questions (question) and can't keep his mind on (keep one's mind on 专心于) the work. Parents are afraid (/əˈfreɪd/ adj. 害怕的; be afraid of 害怕……) of a call from the class (新义 /klɑːs/ n.[C] 班级; class teacher 班主任) teacher. Late at night, many of us ask ourselves (/ˌaʊəˈselvz/ pron. 我们自己), "What did I do wrong (新词性 /rɒŋ/ adv. 错；不对)? Why are we doing this again?"

11 Why does this keep happening (happen)? A long holiday makes kids too sure of themselves: (be sure of oneself 自信) "So much time! A bright (新义 /braɪt/ adj. 聪明的) kid like me can finish it easily." This kind of thinking shows (show) they have no idea how fast they really work. Parents can help them note (新词性 /nəʊt/ vt. 记录; note down 记下) down how long things take: two pages (page /peɪdʒ/ n.[C] 页) of new characters (新义 character /ˈkærəktə(r)/ n.[C] 汉字；字), ten maths questions, or one piece (新义 /piːs/ n.[C] 一篇; a piece of 一篇（件）) of writing (新义 /ˈraɪtɪŋ/ n.[U] 作文；文章).

12 「The longer (long) the holiday goes on, the more everyone plays.」[4]

译[4] 假期过得越久，大家就玩得越多。

Even the grown-ups (grow; grown-up 成年人) only want to eat, drink and have fun. Then try to get the kids to sit down and do their homework. 「What a challenge that is!」[1]

语法[1] 感叹句 感叹句用来表达强烈的感情，常用 what 或 how 引导。What a challenge 放句首，后接 that is，比 That is a challenge 语气强得多。

译 5 要是作业像玩一样有吸引力，孩子们就不会全都拖到最后一晚了。

Riding the "Slow Radish" Taxis of Wuhan

乘坐武汉的"慢萝卜"出租车

专题报道·Feature

话题 无人驾驶·城市交通 | 新词 20 | 新义 21 | 短语 23 | 全文 872 词

1 At a busy bus stop in Wuhan, the roads come alive during rush hour with a strange mix of old and new. Ordinary taxis now share the road with driverless robotaxis, each with a turning laser radar on its roof. As the two kinds of cars push through traffic, local people laugh at the new ones. They call them "shaoluobo", or "stupid radish". The name plays on Luobo Kuaipao ("radish runs fast"), the Chinese name of Baidu's robotaxi service Apollo Go, and on a local word for someone who is a bit slow.[1]

2 The government and big technology companies are pushing hard for self-driving cars. To some people, the cars promise safer roads, cheaper rides and cleaner air. Others are not so sure about that promise. Baidu already has over 400 robotaxis in Wuhan and plans to reach 1,000 by the end 新义 /end/ n.[sing.] （时期的）末尾 of 2024. The cheap rides are popular, and it is now common to see people on the street waiting (wait) for one. In coffee /ˈkɒfi/ n.[U] 咖啡 shops, customers (shop, customer) often share stories (story) about their rides, good and bad. Reporters (reporter) from Sixth Tone /ˌsɪksθ ˈtəʊn/ n. 第六声（媒体名） journeyed 新词性 journey /ˈdʒɜːni/ vi. 旅行 across the city in them for three days, from the morning rush hour until late at night.

3 Ordering (order) a robotaxi is just like ordering any other ride: you choose where to be picked (pick) up and dropped (drop) off on a phone app. But when the car arrives (arrive), things feel different. To open the door, you type the last four numbers (number) of your phone number on a screen. 「You take a seat (take a seat 坐下) in the back, and the car will not move until everyone is wearing (wear) a seat belt (/belt/ n.[C] 带子; seat belt 安全带) and someone has pressed (press) the "start" button on the screen.」[2]

5 There are problems, though. The boot 新义 /buːt/ n.[C] （汽车）后备箱 of the car cannot be used for bags, so people travelling with big suitcases are out of luck. 6 Still, Wuhan is at the heart of China's self-driving push, and it has taken the lead. It has the world's largest test area for self-driving cars, and unlike other cities, it lets them drive right in the busy centre of town. In May, Wang Yunpeng, a

7 But the technology is far from (far from 远非；远不) perfect. In July, an Apollo Go car hit 新义 /hɪt/ vt. 撞 a person walking across the road. Video of the event spread fast online, and its spread 新词性 /spred/ n.[U] 传播 started a heated (heat + -ed → 形容词 adj. 激烈的) discussion /dɪˈskʌʃn/ n.[C] 讨论 about safety. Some people said a car stopped short (stop short 突然停住) in a storm /stɔːm/ n.[C] 暴风雨, sat there for an hour and only started again when the rain stopped. Experts (expert) say the cars also have trouble in bad weather such as snow and fog.

8 Robotaxis (robotaxi) drive slowly, too, usually below 50 kilometres an hour and never above 70, and they often stop suddenly, which makes traffic jams (jam /dʒæm/ n.[C] 堵塞; traffic jam 交通堵塞) worse in one of China's most crowded 新义 /ˈkraʊdɪd/ adj. 拥挤的 cities (city). Cookies Made from Plastic Bottles

话题 塑料污染·太空食物 | 新词 20 | 新义 15 | 短语 17 | 全文 850 词

1 Have you ever wondered (wonder) where plastic came from? Here is a short history lesson. When plastic first appeared (appear), people actually thought of it as (think of … as 把……看作) a material (/məˈtɪəriəl/ n.[C] 材料) that was good for the environment (/ɪnˈvaɪrənmənt/ n.[sing.] （自然）环境).

2 In the 1860s, a printer in Albany (/ˈɔːlbəni/ n. 奥尔巴尼（美国城市）), New York (/ˌnjuː ˈjɔːk/ n. 纽约州), mixed (mix) a few things together, including (include) bits (bit) of cow (/kaʊ/ n.[C] 奶牛；母牛) bone, and made a new material that could be pressed (press) into any shape. It was the grandfather of the plastic we know today. 「At that time, oil seemed (seem) to be almost endless, so people believed (believe) that plastic made from it could take the place of things like elephant (/ˈelɪfənt/ n.[C] 大象) teeth (tooth) and silk.」[1]

译[1] 那时，石油似乎几乎用不完，所以人们相信，用石油制成的塑料可以取代象牙、丝绸这类东西。

3 But you already know how the story goes. Plastic does not go away (go away 消失). It just builds up (build; build up 积聚) and pollutes (pollute /pəˈluːt/ vt. 污染) the environment, and over hundreds (hundred) of years, slowly breaks (新义 break /breɪk/ vi. 碎裂；破碎) into smaller and smaller pieces (piece). These pieces end up inside every living thing on Earth, and humans (human) are no exception (except + -ion → 名词 n.[C] 例外). Today, plastic pollution (/pəˈluːʃn/ n.[U] 污染) is one of the

7 "Plastic is carbon, and food is carbon," said Lahiru Jayakody, one of the scientists working on the project. In other words, plastic and food share a common building block. In a lab, chemistry can rebuild PET into something like protein through a long series of steps. But there is a simpler and greener way: let tiny living things work for us. "Microbes are very clever," Jayakody said. "So we're using them to solve the problems that we made ourselves."

8 But the yeast cannot eat plastic straight away. Using water, high heat and high pressure, the scientists first break the plastic down into much smaller pieces. In a video, the team compared this to Lego. 「The yeast cannot use a whole Lego castle, but if you break the castle down into single pieces, the yeast can build those pieces into something people want.」[3]

The university sees eating them as a risky (risk + -y → 形容词 adj. 有风险的) experiment that needs (need) special permission. The team, however, is sure of (be sure of 对……有把握) its cookies. Its data shows (show) that µBites are safe to eat, and "it has a pleasant, inviting (invite + -ing → 形容词 adj. 诱人的) smell, so it should taste good too," Jayakody told New Scientist. /ˌnjuː ˈsaɪəntɪst/ n.《新科学家》杂志

11 The project got money from the Deep Space Food Challenge, /ˌdiːp ˈspeɪs ˈfuːd ˌtʃælɪndʒ/ n. 深空食物挑战赛 held (hold) by NASA /ˈnæsə/ n. 美国国家航空航天局 and the Canadian Space Agency. /kəˌneɪdiən ˈspeɪs ˌeɪdʒənsi/ n. 加拿大航天局 The goal was to develop new ways of producing (produce) safe and delicious /dɪˈlɪʃəs/ adj. 美味的 food for people on long trips (trip) into deep space, using (use) as little as possible and making as little waste as possible. Out in space, this idea could give astronauts (astronaut) some food and deal with plastic waste at the same time.

12 Of course, most of us will never go into deep space. So the team also changed some yeast to make things that give food a nice taste. One kind uses (use) plant material to make the taste of vanilla. (/vəˈnɪlə/ n.[U] 香草) Another kind, a bright red yeast, uses (use) part of the PET to make something that changes (change) the colour of the cookies and turns (turn) into vitamin (/ˈvɪtəmɪn/ n.[C] 维生素（vitamin A 维生素A）) A inside our bodies (body).

13 But the team itself agrees (agree) that μBites may not do much about (do sth about 处理；解决) plastic pollution. According to the United Nations (nation /ˈneɪʃn/ n.[C] 国家; the United Nations 联合国), the world makes more than 400 million tons (ton) of plastic every year. About two-thirds (新词性 third /θɜːd/ n.[C] 三分之一) of it is used once and quickly thrown (throw) away. There is no way to (there is no way to 没办法（做）) turn all of that into cookies.

14 「And since most people already know that plastic and tiny plastic pieces can harm (/hɑːm/ vt. 伤害) us, it is hard to imagine many people wanting to buy plastic cookies.」[4]

译 4 而且大多数人已经知道，塑料和微小的塑料碎片可能会伤害我们，所以很难想象会有很多人愿意买塑料做的饼干。

12 Google's Pixel phones have a feature called Best Take. We've all taken a group photo where someone closed their eyes or forgot to smile. Thomas Germain, who writes the BBC technology column Keeping Tabs, says: "It's usually me." With Best Take, you take several pictures and then pick the prettiest faces from different shots for one final image. The result is a nice picture of a moment that never happened. But "that's probably how you want to remember this moment", says Mantiuk. After all, it's a group photo, not something to prove a crime. Google says its team is full of photographers with a real love of photography.

Why Teenage Boys Stop Reading

话题 青少年阅读·调查报告 | 新词 3 | 新义 18 | 短语 12 | 全文 822 词

1 How often do you pick up a book just for fun? If you are a boy in the UK aged 14 to 16, the answer is probably "not very often". New research has found that fewer than one in ten boys of that age read every day. Schoolwork, screens and sport, it says, are pushing reading for pleasure out of teenage life.

for fun 为了消遣

age + -ed → 形容词 adj. ..... 岁的

few school + work → 名词 n.[U] 学校功课

新义 push /pʊʃ/ vt. 挤（出）；排挤

for pleasure 为了乐趣

2 The National Literacy Trust, a group that helps children read and write, asked nearly 115,000 children and young people aged five to 18 about their reading. Almost half (46.9%) of children aged eight to 11 said they enjoyed reading. Among 11- to 14-year-olds, that number fell to less than a third (29.5%), and for 14- to 16-year-olds it fell even further, to 28.6%.

3 Daily reading drops in the same way. Of children aged eight to 11, 31.1% read every day. Between 11 and 14, it is 17.1%, and from 14 to 16, it is only 14%. By the middle of the teenage years, the report says, reading every day has become unusual.

4 Reading falls for both boys and girls in the early teenage years. But in the later teenage years there are "signs of recovery" among girls, while the numbers for boys stay low. Over a third of girls (36%) aged eight to 11 reported reading daily, compared with about a quarter (26.3%) of boys of the same age. By 14 to 16, this had fallen to 17.6% of girls and just 9.8% of boys.

As young people grow older, he explained, reading has to fight for their time against many other things: more pressure, changing routines, new interests and activities, and more freedom. "As a result, reading can become easier to push out, particularly when it is not part of daily life." Teenage boys' reading, he added, is especially easy to lose.

9 The study, shared first with the Guardian, also includes almost 50,000 comments from 11- to 16-year-olds about how reading fits, or does not fit, into their everyday lives. Many teenage boys had good things to say. They found reading calm and peaceful, and for many of them it is still a real pleasure. "If I'm upset, I can read a book to calm down," said one boy. "Reading is great for when you have a bad day at school. You can just read a book to stop worrying about it," said another. Some also enjoyed learning through reading. "Teenagers themselves told us they are more likely to read when it connects to their interests, such as football, video games and friendship," Douglas said, and when they can choose what and how they read, and when reading fits naturally into their lives. Young people read text in many different ways today, he added. 「Seeing how all of these can work together with books will be key to helping more teenagers develop a reading habit that can help their learning, their happiness and their confidence at an important moment in their lives.」[4]

The Dogs That Learn by Listening In

话题 毒蛇·抗蛇毒血清 | 新词 10 | 新义 16 | 短语 18 | 全文 852 词

"But you can hear everything." In hospital, he could hear the doctors talking about in hospital 住院 him. "Why did he do it?" they asked. In fact, he had just made a careless /ˈkeələs/ adj. 粗心的 mistake.

2 Friede has been bitten by snakes over 200 times, on purpose.

3 The reason lies in the numbers. Every year, 5 million people around the world are bitten by snakes. About 138,000 of them die, and more than 400,000 lose a part of their body. There is a medicine for snake bites, called antivenom. It was first invented 125 years ago by Albert Calmette, but it has not changed much since then, and it is far from perfect. 「It is made by putting venom into horses and collecting the antibodies their bodies make to fight it.」[1]

4 Friede wanted to find a way to make antivenom without horses. But he did not want to die, and he did not want to lose a hand. He did not even want to miss work.

5 In 2001 he began injecting himself with venom. Back in 1999 he had taken a short course on collecting venom from spiders and other small animals, so getting it from snakes was easy enough.

September 2001, at 11.02 at night. A cobra bit him, he waited an hour, and then he let a second cobra bite him. After the first bite he was fine. But all his antibodies were now busy with the first lot of venom, so he had nothing left to fight the second. At midnight, he dropped. His heart stopped, and he did not wake up for four days. Doctors had to give him antivenom from the local zoo. He actually had antivenom back at his house, but the people who took him to hospital did not know that.

8 When he got out of hospital, he saw two choices: he could stop because he had made a mistake, or he could learn from it and go on. He went back to his experiment. Since then he has never needed antivenom again.

9 He began writing to scientists. Friede has a letter from Barry Marshall, who used himself in his own experiment and won a Nobel Prize. He also spoke to Peter Doherty, another Nobel winner. He was shocked that such famous people actually took him seriously. From then on, he gave himself to the study of venom.

10 Venom can be very different even within one kind of snake. The perfect example is the brown snake in Australia: in the north, its venom is different from the venom in the south. That is the problem with antivenoms. Each one is made to treat bites in a certain area, so it may not work in another. Friede wanted antibodies that could fight every kind of venom, so he kept working with different snakes from all over the world. Of around 650 kinds of snakes with venom, he tried to pick the most dangerous ones he could get, like taipans, the most deadly snakes in the world, and cobras. Taipan bites, he says, are actually pretty easy. But some other snakes have venom that destroys parts of the body. "The pain is huge," he says.

7 As the dish spread, each area made its own style, different from the others. Sun Fengyi, 42, from Houma in Shanxi, remembers eating malatang a lot like the Tianshui style in his hometown nearly 30 years ago. "One stick cost five mao to one kuai," he says. "We could also add local pancake. We could fill our stomachs for just a few kuai." 「Mao's favourite comes from Yiyang in Hunan, where the food on sticks sits ready- cooked in hot, spicy soup, ready for people to pick up and eat.」[3]

8 In the last ten years, big companies like Yangguofu and Zhang Liang have changed the recipe for people who don't like spicy food. They use bone soup or tomato soup and add sesame sauce for a richer, softer taste. Together the two, both from Harbin, have about 12,000 stores. As a popular saying puts it: "Malatang is hot pot for one, and hot pot is malatang for a group."

shops now weigh the food you choose and set the price by its weight. One malatang meal at Mao's university dining hall even cost her fifty yuan. Liu He, 23, from Beijing, takes only two "heavy" things per meal, because tofu and similar foods weigh a lot. "If I'm not careful, the bill often surprises me," she says. Twenty years ago, a meal cost under 10 yuan; now she has paid 50. There have also been food safety problems: customers have found hair and insects in their bowls.

10 Still, Sun thinks malatang can be good for you, since it is boiled with little oil. "The soup is supposed to be made with real bone," he says. While most fast food has few fresh vegetables, malatang shops usually offer plenty. Liu eats it more in winter to keep warm. Especially when she feels nervous, she would like a hot bowl even more, because it helps her relax.

11 In March, Liu tried the Tianshui style at a new restaurant that opened up in Beijing. 「To her surprise, it was not as spicy or as good as she had hoped.」[4]

2 On 7 April 2025, Colossal Biosciences reported what it called the "world's first de-extinction": the birth of three dire wolves, animals that died out long ago, during the ice ages. The lovely pups became stars at once. With coats of snowy white and strong bodies, they looked as if they had walked straight out of the TV show Game of Thrones.

4 The problem is genes. Colossal didn't build the animals from a complete set of dire wolf DNA. It started with the genetic instruction book of a grey wolf and made changes to it, based on ancient DNA from two dire wolf fossils. To Gill, a real dire wolf should have the full dire wolf plan. 「What Colossal has done, she says, is make a grey wolf with changed genes.」[2]

6 Dire wolves lived in the Americas until about 12,000 years ago. Colossal took DNA from an old tooth and an ear bone, and this ancient DNA ended up shaping the pups' biology. But it is hard to read an animal's genes clearly from ancient DNA. Soon after an animal dies, its DNA starts to get cut up into tiny pieces. Fresh DNA is like a long piece of paper, Shapiro says, but ancient DNA is 7 Then the team made 20 changes to the genes of grey wolf cells in the lab, affecting coat colour, body size and the shape of the ears and head. A change to one colour gene gave the pups their pale coats. The changed cells were used to grow babies inside dog mothers. They gave birth to twin males, Romulus and Remus, last fall, in October, and to their sister Khaleesi four months later.

8 Gill thinks the science is cool and exciting. But, she says, “the public is going to believe that an animal that lived 10,000 years ago is back. And it is definitely not.”

14 Scientists outside Colossal, like Adam Hartstone-Rose, want to study the pups, but he also worries about them. Long ago, dire wolves "lived in a completely different world", he says. The world was much colder then, and many animals that lived beside them are gone. The twins and their sister have no pack to live, hunt and play with. 「Imagine, he says, being the only ones of your kind on the face of the Earth.」[5]

1 It is a rainy summer afternoon in Beijing, a working day. During his lunch break, Wu Xing quietly gets out of his office with a small fishing rod. For the 30-year-old computer researcher, these short moments by the water are how he resets his mind. "I don't sit and think about nothing," he says, watching his float move up and down on the water. "I fish."

2 Fishing used to be seen as a hobby for old, retired men in sun hats. Now it is popular among young people under stress in China's cities. It is easy to start, and many people believe it has the power to calm the mind. China has about 160 million people who love fishing, and more than 45 per cent of them are between 25 and 44. 「From 2020 to 2023, young shoppers under 26 bought nearly four times as much fishing equipment online as before.」[1]

1 In 2020, building (新义 /ˈbɪldɪŋ/ n.[U] 建造；施工) machines (machine) broke ground (break; break ground 动工) to make Xi'an's (n. 西安) Xianyang International Airport bigger. The airport is not far from the (n. 咸阳) famous Terracotta Warriors (/ˌterəˌkɒtə ˈwɒriəz/ n. 兵马俑), and the workers (worker) nearly ran over (run over 从上面压过) another great find.

2 Under the place planned (plan) for a new terminal (/ˈtɜːmɪnl/ n.[C] 航站楼) lay (lie) 28 small figures (新义 figure /ˈfɪgə(r)/ n.[C] 人像；塑像) of musicians (musician). 「They had been shut (/ʃʌt/ vt. 关；封闭) inside a tomb (/tuːm/ n.[C] 坟墓；古墓) for more than 1,500 years, still holding (hold) their musical instruments (instrument /ˈɪnstrəmənt/ n.[C] 乐器; musical instrument 乐器), as if frozen (新义 freeze /friːz/ vi. 僵住；定住) in the middle of a song.」[1]

They came from the Sixteen (/ˌsɪksˈtiːn/ num. 十六) Kingdoms (kingdom; the Sixteen Kingdoms 十六国) period (304–439) and were part of a huge discovery: more than 4,000 tombs and 20,000 objects (object). Most were put away; only a few, including (include) the musicians, were chosen (choose) to be shown (新义 show /ʃəʊ/ vt. 展出).

"Since the 1980s, one group of archaeologists after another has been working on this one huge project. Every time the airport grew, it uncovered important finds," said Li Ming, an expert who has worked at the site since 1999. Earlier terminals had already uncovered more than 585 tombs. Then, in 2020, the team found several thousand new tombs, and the news quickly spread across Chinese social media.

Who Clears the Plate?

专题报道·Feature

话题 家务分工·校园霸凌 | 新词 9 | 新义 19 | 短语 11 | 全文 846 词

1 Last year, at a dinner party in a friend's flat in Shanghai, the writer watched her friend's younger brother, a middle school student, refuse to clear his plate after the meal. "Cleaning is women's work," he said. When his mother said he was wrong, he pointed to his father. "Dad never does it either." His point was clear: Dad doesn't clean, and neither should he.

2 The writer couldn't forget it. She sensed that this was more than a rude teenage boy. He had learned something about men and women at home. That made her wonder: what else might children learn from watching who does the dishes? 「If parents believe men and women should behave in different ways, will their children look down on classmates who don't fit those ideas?」[1]

Shanghai Jiao Tong University (n. 上海交通大学) studied (study) survey data from more than 50,000 young people aged 10 to 16 in 15 countries (country). Certain (新词性 /ˈsɜːtn/ pron. 某些) of the questions (question) asked about their parents; others asked how they behaved (behave) towards (新义 /təˈwɔːdz/ prep. 对；对待) other children. The team wanted to test one idea: is the way a family shares (share) housework (/ˈhaʊswɜːk/ n.[U] 家务活) linked (link) to whether a teenager bullies (bully /ˈbʊli/ vt. 欺负；霸凌) others?

4 The data suggests (suggest) that it does, but the story (新义 /ˈstɔːri/ n.[sing.] 情况；事情的经过) was not as simple as they expected (expect). There were four kinds (kind) of families (family). About one third were "fair" (新词性 /feə(r)/ adj. 公平的) families (family), where both parents shared (share) housework, child care (child care 照看孩子) and earning (earn) money. Another 45 per cent were "changing" (change) families (family): parents shared (share) child care and earning money more and more, but mothers still did most of the cooking (新义 /ˈkʊkɪŋ/ n.[U] 做饭；烹饪) and cleaning. About 17 per cent were "old-style" families (family), with mothers doing almost all the housework while fathers earned (earn) the money. And 5 per cent were "careless" families (family), where neither (新词性 /ˈnaɪðə(r)/ det. 两者都不) parent took care of the main jobs (job) at home regularly (regular + -ly → 副词 adv. 经常；定期地).

5 Teenagers (teenager) from fair families (family) bullied (bully) the least (新词性 /liːst/ adv. 最少), those from careless families (family) the most, and children from the other two kinds of families also bullied more, though the difference was smaller.

family bully

6 The reasons, however, were not the same. In old-style and changing families, it was about fixed ideas of what boys and girls are. 「Children who saw jobs at home strictly divided between Mum and Dad developed stronger ideas about what boys and girls should and shouldn't do.」[2]

Imagine a child who watches Mum do all the housework while Dad makes money. This seems to show that men and women are made for different jobs. 1,600 Kilometres for a Box of Durian

为一箱榴莲跑1600公里

真实故事·True Story

话题 网购·仅退款 | 新词 9 | 新义 23 | 短语 16 | 全文 902 词

1 Would you drive 1,600 kilometres for 190 yuan? (kilometre; /juˈɑːn/ n.[C] 元（人民币）)

Uncle Cheng did. 「This spring, his fight over one box of frozen durian became one of the biggest shopping stories in China, and for once, many people took the seller's side.」[1]

(Uncle Cheng: n. 程大叔; fight: 新义 /faɪt/ n.[C] 争执；较劲; frozen: 新词性 freeze /friːz/ adj. 冷冻的; durian: /ˈduərɪən/ n.[U] 榴莲; became: become; story; for once: 难得一次; took the seller's side: take sb's side 站在……一边)

译[1] 今年春天，他为一箱冻榴莲跟人争执的事，成了中国最热门的购物新闻之一，而且这一次，很多人难得站在了卖家一边。

2 Uncle Cheng sells frozen durian online from Puyang, in Henan Province. On 26 April, a buyer in Dezhou, Shandong, took a box of durian from his shop and paid 190.71 yuan. He sent it the same day in a cold box, and it arrived on the 27th. At noon on 28 April, the buyer asked for a "refund only" — her money back without sending anything back. She left a note: "Never opened and it's already gone bad. It's all dark, with mould growing on it." With it came four photos of fruit with black all over it.

8 In the opinion of (in the opinion of sb 在某人看来) lawyer Tan Mintao (n. 谭敏涛), the buyer cheated the seller and must pay back his costs (cost). 「A volunteer (新词性 /ˌvɒlənˈtɪə(r)/ n.[C] 志愿者) from a sellers' (seller) group pointed (point) out what really gave her away (give sb away 使露馅): one photo showed (show) fruit gone dark after sitting (新义 sit /sɪt/ vi. (物) 放着；搁着) out for a long time, while the other showed fruit still frozen.」[4]

译 4 卖家群里的一位志愿者指出了真正让她露馅的地方：一张照片里的果肉放久了已经发黑，另一张里的果肉却还冻着。

"The two simply don't match," he said.

3 Today, blackboards are being pushed out of classrooms by whiteboards, computers and smart screens. Will they one day disappear? Many mathematicians hope not. In March 2015, a Japanese company called Hagoromo said it was going to close. The news worried mathematicians all over the world. Their favourite chalk was Hagoromo, sometimes called "the Rolls-Royce of chalk": it seldom broke, wrote smoothly and kept your hands clean. Luckily, another company bought the business, and the chalk never ran out.

7 Blackboards give artists ideas, too. One American artist made a clever picture that seemed to join scientists and their blackboards into one, and it has become one of her classics. An American photographer photographed the blackboards of mathematicians around the world and put 110 of the photos in a book called "Do Not Erase", and readers turn its pages in wonder. At a maths centre in London, every room has a big blackboard. Its director, Thomas Fink, explains: "The blackboard is the best way out of a hole. You do most of your work on paper. Then, when you get stuck, you go to the blackboard to share the problem with your friends. 「But the funny thing is, as you write the problem out, you often solve it yourself."」[5]

8 China has its own blackboard heroes. In 1920, the mathematician Jiang Lifu started the maths department at Nankai University and ran it almost alone. When he taught, he drew by hand and never used a ruler unless he really needed one. His writing was tidy, he used coloured chalk in a clear system,

3 On the nights of 24 and 25 November, reporters visited more than ten hospitals. At night, the word "emergency" seemed to mean "wait for hours". They also found something strange: the big city hospitals were packed, but emergency rooms at smaller district hospitals were almost empty.

The screen showed number 148, with about 27 people still waiting. Two rooms were open and the doctors had no time to rest, but the line moved slowly. 6 At Chengdu Sixth People's Hospital, Mrs Wang had waited almost an hour before the first doctor saw her child. "There are so many sick kids, and the doctors are too busy," she said.

7 The busiest was the Women's and Children's Central Hospital. At about 11 p.m., many parents stood in long lines hugging their children. Reporters counted more than 120 people in the waiting room, and the numbers on the screen were over 300. "About two hours," said the nurse on duty, answering one question after another. "Three rooms is the most we can open." 「Ms Zhong had waited over an hour for her first visit, then almost half an hour more to show the doctor her child's test results.」[2]

"There are simply too many people. It feels like all we do is wait in line."

8 District hospitals were a different story. At one, the screen showed 200 and number 192 was already being seen. "We waited fifteen or twenty minutes," said Mr Zhao as he walked out. At midnight, the hallway of the Chenghua District hospital was empty. A doctor said someone was there 24 hours a day, so if a child was not well, the family should feel free to come at any time.

9 Many parents work during the day and can only bring their children at night. "We hope the hospital can open more rooms and see patients faster," said one gentleman, Mr Yang. "Sick children already feel bad. When everyone is crowded at the door, the kids suffer and we worry." Other parents agreed with him. Another mother, Ms Zhang, got a call from a teacher in the afternoon saying her child had a fever, but she could not leave work. "Old people don't really know how to get a number or a blood test, so we had to wait until his dad or I finished work."

6 In the Ming dynasty, pirates wanted to control sea trade. Wang Zhi built his power in Japan, where his strong ships and rich goods won him the respect of local rulers. He became a bridge for trade between China and Japan. His goal was free trade at sea, and he championed it to the end. He even used force to destroy other pirate bands, hoping the court would then allow the trade. But the Ming government made a surprise attack on him. Let down by the court, he rose up openly and called himself "King of Huizhou". Later, an official named Hu Zongxian offered him peace, without meaning it. Wang made a big mistake and believed him. In 1557 he went to Hangzhou to talk, and was caught and later killed.

4 Still, he did not think of building (build) a submarine until 2014. That year he watched (watch) a TV programme (新义 /ˈprəʊgræm/ n.[C] 节目) that told the story of a man who built (build) a submarine all by himself. 「He began to dream of building (build) one too, and the idea pushed (push) him to turn the sand (新义 /sænd/ n.[U] 沙地；沙滩) along the riverbank where he worked into his workshop /ˈwɜːkʃɒp/ n.[C] 工作间 and testing (test) ground (testing ground 试验场).[2]」

译 2 他也开始梦想造一艘潜艇，这个想法促使他把干活的那片河岸沙地变成了自己的工作间和试验场。

5 "I've been around water for years and have seen all kinds (kind) of boats (boat), metal ones and wooden ones, but never one that could go underwater," Zhang told China Central Television /ˌtʃaɪnə ˌsentrəl ˈtelɪvɪʒn/ n. 中国中央电视台. "I thought, if others can build one, then so can I (so can I 我也能)."

6 His family was against (新义 /əˈgenst/ prep. 反对) it. They said the idea was expensive, dangerous and useless. But Zhang continued (continue) with his plan. Using (use) what he knew about wood and ships, he began to draw the submarine in his head. Then he bought (buy) basic materials (material), such as steel (/stiːl/ n.[U] 钢), batteries /ˈbætri/ n.[C] 电池 and an engine, worth just 5,000 yuan /juˈɑːn/ n.[C] 元（人民币） in total. Only six months later, he realised his idea. His first submarine was six metres long, 1.2 metres high and weighed two tons.

7 On the day he first took it into the water, he could feel his hands getting wet on the controls. "It felt like a dream," he remembered. "I was terribly afraid that water might get in, but I still wanted to go deeper."

8 Water did get in. Even so, Zhang was given a national patent for his design. In 2016 he built a boat that moves on top of the water, and it also won a patent. Zhang says his mind never rests. "I'm always thinking about the design," he said. Once he has a new idea, he acts on it right away.

9 Next, he put 40,000 yuan into a second submarine, the one that later became Big Blackfish. He made the body longer, seven metres in all, which made it big enough for two people.

10 To stop it from turning over, Zhang poured about two tons of concrete into the body. He also added two water tanks, one at the front and one at the back. "The tanks take in water to dive, and let it out to come up," he explained. "The concrete keeps the submarine balanced."

11 To keep water out better, he joined every metal part with great care and put in doors in the shape of a circle. He bought special material and stuck it along the joins to make them stronger, then glued over them with glass glue. "Now no water can get in," he said.

12 The submarine can travel at four knots, and Zhang is very proud of how well it works. "One small battery and an engine can push this huge thing underwater," he said. "It can stay under for half an hour without a single drop of water getting in. It can even go backwards."

13 Zhang is looking to build an even bigger submarine. "You never know what you can do until you try," he said.

14 He is not the first person in China to build a submarine at home. Over the past twenty years, several other inventors have done similar things. In 2009, Li Yuming, a "farmer inventor" who taught himself and built five submarines, got a business licence. He

1 Wu Yufei, a dancer from Sichuan, gives a thumbs-up sign. Lady Gaga's pop song "Abracadabra" starts, and he begins a street dance on the stage of America's Got Talent. Behind him, eight silver Unitree robots dance to the beat in perfect time, copying every move of his body like a mirror. Then they all jump and turn over in the air together. The audience can hardly believe their eyes. In under two minutes, the act wins four yeses from the judges.

12 Chen does not see a choice between the two. "Once robots can move well enough and do many kinds of actions, they will be able to do all kinds of jobs for people," he says. Kairi agrees. 13 Chen Yanxi says that shows happen to be something robots are good at right now. Races show how well a robot moves and how long it can keep going, while football tests how well it works with others. "We push robots' bodies so that one day they can take the place of human workers," she says. The government is giving a push, too. 4 He was not the only one. Since late last year, many worried and angry people have called, emailed and sent messages to the church, saying their stolen iPhones were there. One person came to the front door with a police officer. "I stopped counting," said Pastor Gideon Apé, "because there are so many people." The phones had been taken all over the East Coast — at a music festival in Philadelphia, at a pub in Fort Lauderdale, and in many other cities.

4 In 1843, after a war between Britain /ˈbrɪtn/ n. 英国 and China, Britain took over

Hong Kong. But the walled city — named after its walls, guns, gate and watchtowers — stayed in Chinese hands. Over the years, the Chinese living there added a shopping area, a school and more. Many saw the city as a necessary way to stop Britain from influencing the region, but it was open to everyone. British people, Chinese visitors and others crowded into the small walled city, and it soon became a popular place to have fun.

5 Then, in 1898, Britain and China signed an agreement that gave Britain 99 more years of rule over Hong Kong — today it is seen as one of a series of "unequal treaties". 11 "Some people think we are risking our lives just for fun," Su says. "But storm chasing means much more than this." Disaster research can take advantage of it. After a tornado in Shandong, Su's drone filmed a factory roof made of metal sheets, and a third of it was destroyed. Another picture, taken five kilometres away, showed a gas station with its roof completely gone. Putting such pictures on a map, researchers can follow a storm's route and judge the harm it caused. His videos can also be helpful for studying how well buildings stand up to wind.

1 On Douyin (n. 抖音), China's TikTok (/ˈtɪktɒk/ n. 抖音国际版), a new kind of livestream (/ˈlaɪvstriːm/ n.[C] 网络直播) is drawing (draw) huge crowds (crowd). All you see is a pair of (a pair of 一把；一对) scissors (/ˈsɪzəz/ n.[pl.] 剪刀), a clear (新义 /klɪə(r)/ adj. 透明的) plastic stand (新义 /stænd/ n.[C] 架子；台子) and rows (新词性 row /rəʊ/ n.[C] 排；行) of card (新义 /kɑːd/ n.[C] 卡片) packs (pack). Nobody knows which cards (card) are inside until the host opens the pack. So what is really for sale (for sale 出售的) here is luck. Some people get the card they want on the first try (on the first try 第一次就); others buy three packets (packet) and still have no luck. A message on the screen says that children may not buy, which tells you that many of the people watching (watch) are children.

2 Young adults (adult) went crazy for (go crazy for 为……着迷) Pop Mart (/ˌpɒp ˈmɑːt/ n. 泡泡玛特（盲盒品牌）) toys (toy), which come in (come in 以……形式出现) closed boxes (box), so you don't know what you've got until you've paid (pay). Kayou (n. 卡游（卡牌公司）), a Chinese card maker, has asked to sell its shares (新义 share /ʃeə(r)/ n.[C] 股份) in Hong Kong (/ˌhɒŋ ˈkɒŋ/ n. 香港), and it is expected (expect) that this will happen soon. 3 "If I miss a livestream, I feel worried all day," says Fang Si, a third-grader. Every day after school she asks her mother for one hour on the tablet to watch card shows. On the surface, these shows advertise cards. But they are not just advertising: many work like gambling games. In one of them, you keep buying and opening packs until a certain character pops up.

4 "Time to open the golden box!" the host calls out as the scissors cut through the plastic. Whoever buys a whole big box of cards at once is a hero on the show, and to Fang, this is a symbol of wealth. Her parents give her 20 yuan a week. Tonight's box holds a total of 1,440 cards and costs 2,640 yuan. "Even if Fang never spent a cent of her pocket money, she would have to save until she finished primary school to buy it."[2]

1 "This has to be done in China," says Yang Hao. "Every corner of people's lives has gone digital."

Yang Hao: n. 杨浩
lives: life

2 In November 2023, Yang, an artist and doctoral student in the UK, went on a trip across China: 68 places in 134 days, all without the internet. China has more than 1.12 billion internet users, and almost everything runs through a screen. When people go shopping, take a bus, order from a menu or check into a hotel, they use their phones, and many shop online. Yang wanted to find out how well a person could lead a life without it.

He argued with two workers at the ticket office. Changing tickets on a phone is now standard, and they weren't used to doing it by hand. "They complained and felt I was just making trouble for them," Yang says. It wasn't convenient, but Yang enjoyed it. Treating the trip as field research, he excused the two workers.

人物故事·Profile

话题 浏阳烟花·无人机表演 | 新词 2 | 新义 11 | 短语 12 | 全文 841 词

1 When the Chinese New Year fireworks were over and the night sky fell quiet, a big change in China's fireworks business was only just beginning in Liuyang, Hunan Province.

2 For many years, business in Liuyang, the home of Chinese fireworks, was simple: sell fireworks or send workers abroad. That was the world Zhang Yang took over with Intently, the company her father started in 1996.

3 Today, Liuyang is a world leader in fireworks. In 2025, the city's fireworks were worth more than 50 billion yuan. Liuyang made about 70 per cent of China's fireworks sales abroad.

译1 张扬想把烟花从工厂产品变成艺术品，从一年一次的表演变成能带动旅游业、把中国技术卖到全世界的东西。

6 Her chance came in 2014, when China's Ministry of Culture (/ˌmɪnɪstri əv ˈkʌltʃə(r)/ n. 文化部) invited (invite) her company to join the "Happy Chinese New Year" programme abroad. From 2014 to 2019, her team lit up (light up 照亮) the sky over the Hudson River (/ˌhʌdsn ˈrɪvə(r)/ n. 哈德孙河) in New York (/ˌnjuː ˈjɔːk/ n. 纽约) to mark (新义 /mɑːk/ vt. 纪念) the Chinese New Year. It was one of the first times a Chinese fireworks company stood on a big international stage with its own ideas (idea) and full control of (full) control of (完全）掌控 the show.

7 Before COVID-19 (/ˌkəʊvɪd naɪnˈtiːn/ n.[U] 新冠疫情) arrived (arrive), her team had put on shows (show) for national holidays (holiday) and festivals (festival) in many countries (country). Zhang came to believe that the future of fireworks was not in making more of them, but in telling stories (story) with them.[2]

译2 张扬渐渐相信，烟花的未来不在于造得更多，而在于用它们讲故事。

Then the illness spread, and fireworks shows (show) for tourists (tourist) stopped almost everywhere.

8 With few people buying (buy), Zhang made a brave choice that risked (risk) her whole company. She stopped all her old business and put everything into building heavy drones that could carry and fire fireworks.

Instead of the average small drones used for light shows, they chose large ones more than one metre wide. 「The fireworks had to be lit by signal from 500 metres away, and when a firework shot off, the push could shake the drone.」[3]

"We had to change everything at the same time, and nobody had done it before," Zhang said.

11 In 2025, Zhang took her new drones to the Liuyang Fireworks Competition, against teams from Germany, Italy and Sweden. Her idea came from Li Bai, the great Tang Dynasty poet. She built a nine-level tower of fireworks to show his line about a huge

Red Carpet, Pandas and Hard Bargaining

新闻分析·News Analysis

话题 中美关系·元首会晤 | 新词 6 | 新义 11 | 短语 23 | 全文 837 词

1 President Xi Jinping (n. 习近平) went to the US (/ˌjuː ˈes/ n. 美国), and President Donald Trump (/ˌdɒnld ˈtrʌmp/ n. 唐纳德·特朗普（美国总统）) gave him a red-carpet welcome (red-carpet 隆重的; 新词性 /ˈwelkəm/ n.[C] 欢迎；接待). Yet behind the smiles (smile) and handshakes (hand + shake → 名词 n.[C] 握手), Xi did not get everything he wanted.

2 Xi's meetings (meeting) with Trump have one clear aim. China believes (believe) the United States (state) is trying (try) to slow down its rise as a superpower (/ˈsuːpəpaʊə(r)/ n.[C] 超级大国), and it wants Washington (/ˈwɒʃɪŋtən/ n. 华盛顿（指美国政府）) to stay out of its way (stay out of sb's way 不妨碍某人), above all on trade, technology and Taiwan (/ˌtaɪˈwɑːn/ n. 中国台湾).

3 The two countries (country) fought (fight) a tariff (/ˈtærɪf/ n.[C] 关税) war: each side made the other pay extra (新义 /ˈekstrə/ adv. 额外地) on goods (/gʊdz/ n.[pl.] 商品) coming in, and kept (keep) answering (新义 answer /ˈɑːnsə(r)/ vt. 回击；回应) the other's tariffs with new ones. Then they agreed (agree) on a truce (/truːs/ n.[C] 休战协议), which stopped the fight for a while and helped prevent things from getting worse (prevent sth from doing 阻止……做). On this visit the truce was made longer (long), but only by a few months (month), from November to January. 5 Then there is Taiwan. Xi once again made it clear that US arms sales to Taiwan are a "red line" for China. By American law, the US must help the island protect itself. In May, Xi warned Trump that dealing with this question badly could push the two countries into conflict. Trump then put off a decision on a $14 billion arms package for Taiwan, calling it a "very good negotiating chip" with Beijing. [During the talks, Xi may have argued that holding back support for Taiwan would reduce the risk of conflict.[2]

译2 会谈中，习近平可能提出，暂缓对台湾的支持会降低发生冲突的风险。

On Thursday he spoke again of his hope that the US would keep to the "correct position" of being against Taiwan independence. Trump, however, is under some pressure from both of America's main parties to keep supporting Taiwan, and he has not yet made any public response.

6 The two leaders did at least discuss artificial intelligence (AI), though it is not clear whether they agreed on any safety rules. Many people hoped for real decisions, such as a plan to hold a special meeting on AI. 「Not long before, Dario Amodei, the head of the
